A Dog at the Cinema.

One afternoon, a woman went into her local cinema and settled down in her seat, eagerly anticipating the start of the film. A sudden movement on her left caught her eye. She looked past the man sitting next to her and was surprised to see a dog sitting upright in the seat beyond him.

Throughout the film, she couldn't stop sneaking a look at the dog and was astonished to see that it was really focussing on the screen. And, when the film reached a sad part, she even saw a tear running down the dog's face.

When the lights went up, she turned to the man and said:

'Excuse me, but I have to say I'm amazed by your dog. He really seemed to be enjoying the film and I thought I even saw a tear running down his face at the end!'

'I know,' said the man. 'It's amazing, isn't it? Because he didn't enjoy the book at all.'
